King Alexander, the new king of Greece, in his proclamation, issued the other day, says that he is going to follow in the footsteps of his revered father.

Sure, Alex. You never spoke truer words. You sure will follow your revered father—on board a British warship and landed "some where" in Switzerland.

German diplomats are evidently trying to lose as many of the German ships in foreign ports as the submarines can sink of foreign ships. At present they seem to be leading.

The fears of aviators are groundless.

The kaiser doesn't seem to be especially pleased with anything the entente allies are doing, just now. That's encouraging, at least.

As to the perishable provisions eat what you can, and what you can't eat you can can, and later you will have a chance to eat what you can now.

Found—The tops of a few farmers' heads, supposed lost by laughing to see the rains.

Owners can have them by calling, proving property, paying for this advt—and their back subscription—at the office of this great family journal.

"Canadians occupy Lens outposts—Huns retire" was yesterday's news heading.

The old adage: "Distance Lens enchantment to the view," will soon have a new meaning to the skidding Huns.

There's another good thing about enlisting women in the navy. If an accident happens to a big 16-inch gun in the dread hour of battle—one of the dear girls can fix it up with a hairpin.

France declares that she will accept only a French peace.

And the chances are a piece of that peace will be Alsace-Lorraine

Say, if the food speculators should be put into the front line trenches, would they be as anxious to make an advance?

Chilmark's Big Day

WAS SOMETHING TO BE PROUD OF

This year Chilmark started out to have a "big thing" on their sports day—and their enterprise was fully rewarded, for they succeeded in putting on one of the best sport programmes witnessed for some time. Besides the usual athletic sports, they made a specialty of baseball and horse races, when over $500.00 was awarded in prizes.

The uncertain aspect of the weather the day before, and even the morning of the day, threatened to put the programme out of business, but Old Sol decided to reign supreme, and it was a very large gathering that witnessed the day's sports, Chinook being well represented in the crowd.

Baseball

This was a great drawing card, and the "rooters" for the different teams playing were much in evidence, the umpire coming in for the usual compliments for his "rotten" work because he didn't please both teams in his decisions.

1. Rearville vs. Kinmundy were the first to try conclusions, and as the game proceeded it became evident that Rearville could not make the pace. Score 12-4 in favor of Kinmundy.

2. Chinook vs. Atlee. This was one of the hardest fought games of the season, the teams being very evenly matched, as the score indicates, being 3-2 in favor of Chinook.

3. Chinook vs. Kinmundy. Chinook should have won this game, but, instead, went all to pieces and was cleaned up by Kinmundy to the tune of 13-2, taking first money and Chinook second.

Horse Race.

These events drew a bunch of good horses. Here Chinook got in some good work. Bert Boyer did well with his group of horses taking first in free-for-all pony race, first in farmers' trot, first in ladies race, second in relay race, second in hat race.

We had arranged to have a special correspondent for these sports, but being busy on the ball diamond was not able to take in all the events. But we understand the rest of the events were well contested.

During the day 75 gallons of ice cream were consumed, besides a car load of eatables and barrels of drinkables. It was a big day, and a day to be remembered

The Black Flag

THE food pirates in Great Britain are like the food pirates of Canada. They may shout with the loudest in praise of their country, in praise of the war and in favor of pushing the war to the limit. They may also be among the foremost in flag raisings and flag wavings.

But the flag they really carry is the black flag of piracy and the war they wage is not against the common enemy but against their own people, whether they live and trade in Great Britain or live and trade in Canada.

The new food controller of Great Britain, Baron Rhondda, in explaining to the press recently his attitude towards food pirates, said in substance exactly what the people of Canada would expect their food controller to state and to do when he said: "The man who seeks to profit by the necessities of his country at this hour of her peril is nothing but a pirate and a blackmailer and should be treated as such."

Reserve Your Rooms for Hat Stampede

The citizens of Medicine Hat are making every effort to take care of the people who attend the stampede and agricultural exhibition in that city on July 10 to 13th.

Intending visitors to the Hat for those events would do well to reserve their accommodation in advance. In order to reserve rooms, notify the Stampede Secretary, G. W. McClafferty, Medicine Hat, of the date, time and mode (train or car, etc.) of your arrival and number of people in your party, giving number of women and children, if any. Be sure to state for which nights you will need rooms.

Rooms reserved for visitors arriving by train will be held half an hour after arrival of train specified. Rooms reserved for visitors coming by other modes travel will be held until 9 p.m.

It is easy to solve the U-boat in theory. We are waiting very patiently to see the application of some of the ideas so recently exploited.

The Squire's Sweetheart

BY KATHARINE TYNAN

WARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED
London, Melbourne, and Toronto

He opened the door of the New Cottage on such an evening scene as he was familiar with there. Margaret was reading aloud. Her husband was sketching her. He was never tired of sketching his wife and child. In the shaded twilight the room was charming.

He had time to recognize what Mrs. Egerton was reading—
"My lady seems of ivory
Forehead, straight nose and cheeks that be Followed a little mournfully.

"Beata mea domini!"
She looked up, and Egerton looked round at the same moment.
"Why Meyrick?" he said. "I thought you were gone home long ago, man. And didn't you say that be?"

The Squire came forward quickly. "Your sister was frightened," he said, and went on in his disingenuous dour in saying so much and so little. "I waited till she was less frightened, and brought her back. She must not be alone at the cottage again. I told her she must stay here at night for the future, whatever she does by day. He has given me a right to interfere."

"But," said Lionel Egerton, springing to his feet. "What is that you say? Dolly given you a right then, my dear Meyrick? Is it true, Dolly?"

He took his sister's half-unwilling hands and drew her into the circle of his arms.

"By Jove," he said, letting her go. "Dolly shows plainly enough that it is true. I'm very glad, Meyrick. I don't know any man to whom I'd rather give my little sister. Are you not pleased, Granny?"

"Of course I am," answered said Mrs. Egerton, coldly. "I consider Dolly a very fortunate girl. Some people have all the good luck."

"Poor girl!" said her husband sympathetically. "And some people have no luck at all, except to marry a poor devil of an artist who can give them nothing but adoration, child."

As Dolly had well remembered, Mrs. Egerton had a card of saying to her. "What did the Squire care for the suggestion that he could give the girl he loved wealth and position? He knew he had Dolly's heart, and that was all he cared about."

CHAPTER XII

Margaret

Hilary Strangways knocked at the door of 24 Chappell Place, and asked for Mr. Langton.

The servant answered. "Mr. Langton hasn't left the dining room yet, sir," he said; "and when he does he'll be going home."

He uttered the remark with a certain energy. "I know he's ordered the car for nine o'clock."

"I must see him," said Hilary stubbornly. "I need not keep him very long."

"What name, please?" asked the man with a weak air.

Hilary found a card and placed it in his hand.

"Don't look as if you'd much the matter with you neither," he grumbled, as he looked at the card. "You should wait till tomorrow, sir, and not be troubling Mr. Langton out of hours. He always sees patients from two to four."

To mark his disapproval he left Hilary standing in the hall. But he had hardly opened a door of the left-hand side of the hall and passed through before he was back again. "Mr. Langton opens you will come in," he said, and turned about with a disconcerted air to open the door for Hilary.

It did not need any great perception to see that the man who had stood up from the table to receive him was dead tired. His keen, dark face was pale; there were shadows under his eyes which looked as though he had not slept. It might have been the fatigue of the night, but Hilary had begun to murmur an apology. Hilary forgot that he had come to bring the truth out of this man—to tell him what he was doing in keeping Margaret's whereabouts from her friends. He had been working himself up to see him alone in a fact, he had a right to know where Margaret was. Of course she and her mother could not go back to that old place. They ought to have endured his ill-treatment. They need not if only their friends had known. A fine fury had burned in Hilary's breast as he thought upon Margaret's bruised arms and the little cry he had worn from her when he had seized her about the neck of the dress. It brought the blood into his eyes to remember it. He said to himself that old South ought to be strangled. It would be a good thing. He thought he would be well free of such a brute and tyrant.

Hilary sat down by the malodorous table in which the wine and fruit seemed to make a deep reflection. He took a cigarette and lit it. Mr. Langton looked up at him with an expression oddly compounded of humor and tragedy, as though a light played over the darkness of his face. Hilary looked up and caught the expression. It made him feel suddenly as though he had not much chance with this Hilary Strangways. He said to himself that he was not sure a minute after that he had not fancied it—made him feel very young and rather ridiculous.

Perhaps it showed in his face; it was a very ingenious face, so simple that in his school days Hilary Strangways had been occasionally ragged by some misguided boy who presumed his harassment by his rosy cheeks and turned-up nose.

"You want to know," said Mr. Langton, in a deliberate voice which Hilary vaguely suggested of the firmness about it, "where I have hidden Margaret from you, and how I dared to take her mother from the custody of her friends."

Hilary positively blushed—but he stood his ground.

"You are right," said Hilary, with a new respect "that is exactly what I came to ask you."

"Would you like to see Margaret tonight—before you sleep?"

The suddenness and unexpectedness of the question took Hilary's breath away.

"Oh sir," he felt once again like a small boy at the public school in the presence of the Headmaster, did not hope for such a thing. He had no expectation. Naturally their friends have been anxious.

There was one greater cause when they were at Margilda, exposed to the tender mercies of Sir Gilbert Smith, Mr. Langton said, with a sudden bitterness.

"We did not know," began Hilary, stammering. "We could not have imagined such a thing. Do you think we would have allowed it to go on if we had known? Margaret should have told me."

"You know what Margaret is—as proud as she is spirited. Perhaps she thought no one could help her—tell it was a question of saving her mother's life. Then she sent for me. Shall we call it unconventional? One does not think of the conventions when it is a question of life or death."

The clock on the chimney piece of the room began to strike nine, and Mr. Langton stood up.

"The car will be at the door," he said. "If you will come with me you shall see Margaret—unless she refuses to see you."

"I think she will see me," said Hilary, although when last he saw her he was pained in anger.

Mr. Langton smiled; through the smile his eyes kept their look of a lonely man and suffering.

"She told me," he said, "and I told her it was not fair. She owed you an explanation, seeing that you were her father. You did not take her the right way young man."

Hilary followed Mr. Langton to the motor car, which was at the door. He was feeling strangely taken back. He had come, saying to himself that he would force the secret of Margaret's hiding place out of this man; and he beheld, there were on his way to Margaret, without any word being said on his part to bring about such a thing. The bewilderment made him feel unready, while he had a desire to apologize to Mr. Langton, and yet, he said to himself that it would be time enough to do that when he knew more of what was going on. Hilary had always held a grievance tenaciously once it had been formed, which, fortunately, was very seldom.

"If her mother dies," said Mr. Langton, suddenly, "what is to be done of Margaret?"

"Oh, sir," said Hilary, shocked, "I hope there is no danger of that."

A BRIGHT TOBACCO OF THE FINEST QUALITY

10 CENTS PER PLUG

Marketing Farm Produce

By Mrs. McBeath, Headingley, Manitoba.

Our own Postal authorities here are busy extending the rural system, and on the routes already established there is quite an increasing business in postal packages—eggs, butter, poultry, cut of meat, etc. All go quite nicely by mail. The cost is less than express and if our authorities would extend the limit of cheap rate from 20 miles to, say, 50, there would be a much bigger trade.

I may mention the success of some of my neighbors with the Parcel Post. One woman has been shipping new laid eggs all winter by mail. In January she shipped sixty dozen, mostly for invalids as one customer told others, and she cannot possibly supply the demand. In summer she sent milk-fed chickens for which she has standing orders, also turkeys. Another woman sends out a lot of cuts of beef, sausage, meat, etc., and several others shipped eggs. So far there has not been a complaint, which says a great deal for our Postal Service. I dare say you all have some experience in the use of Parcel Post these times in sending things to your boys at the front, and have been surprised what you could send, so that you can realize what a simple method you have right at hand to carry out your marketing.

I may tell you that lately the Post Office in Winnipeg has sent out two carloads of mail boxes for the Rural Routes, something like 2,000 boxes, so the possibilities of winter business are before you.

All produce nowadays must be put up in attractive form if it is to command a good price, but the variety of containers now to be had is endless. As a rule they are more service, which does away with trouble and worry over the returning of crocks or cases.

A good plan is adopted by people who club together and send orders to the country. This is a capital plan, and in some instances I know of has worked out very satisfactorily. The idea was started in the States by an apple grower who thought that there were possibilities of selling to men in cities so he started in by putting up nice cartons of picked apples with the motto: "An apple a day keeps the doctor away" and the result was in the offices. This led to other farm stuff being clubbed in the same way.

The spring comes in the amount sent, as express charges are less on the bigger quantity, and the produce is easily divided up or arranged. In offices this has been tried where there are several employees. One person acts as secretary, collects the orders on a certain day, with the payments, sends them off, and on arrival of the goods distributes them. In only one or two cases have I heard of dissatisfaction but a change was made and another producer gave complete satisfaction. And the little circles are becoming more common. Their motto is "Fresh Goods, and Cash With Order."

For those who live on an automobile route there are many chances of disposing of small quantities of produce. Many of the ordinary things on a farm are dainties to the city folks, and there are many inquiries from passers-by, for eggs, butter, cream, buttermilk, chickens, sweet corn, rhubarb and berries when in season. If the use of bulletin boards naming the articles for sale, and the general much more business could be done in this way.

There is also the matter of private customers. I have known who get in grade by express or delivery. Opinion differs as to this method. In my opinion it is unsatisfactory, because the promised supply fails just when it is expected to go on—quality is sometimes not up to standard. It is of differing opinion on set days comes in when the horses happen to be extra busy on the farm. Then there are difficulties on the other side of collecting payments and getting returned empties sent back, and so on. It is not an unusual thing too for the country woman to be done out of her goods. I heard of one woman who had fresh eggs sent to her and after some months wrote to say she would not pay the price, as the eggs were rotten! Just lately I heard of two sets of crocks of butter had been sent in. One woman kept her crock in a damp cellar and said the butter was mouldy and refused to pay. The other kept hers near a steam pipe and declared her butter went rancid and she refused to pay. Well, there is a very simple remedy for offenders in both cases. "Cut them out," and stay only with those who deal fairly. While some customers are unsatisfactory there are others with whom it is a real pleasure to do business; consider prompt, and efficient; there is no trouble at all in dealing with them. I know of one such, who on receiving poultry sent in, returned two cents a pound more than the price asked, because the quality was so good, and another gentleman who paid three cents a pound for turkeys more than was asked, for the same reason. Little wonder there is satisfaction on both sides there. It was a pleasure for those buyers to show their appreciation in that way, and the farm woman could not fail to feel pleasure and encouragement, which might show itself in an extra pot of cream or some other dainty popped in with the next order.

In trading, as in any other line of life, we should remember the Golden Rule: "Do to others as you would be done by." And many of the present difficulties in marketing would disappear.

Dairying in the West

Development of This Industry Making Great Strides

Until the last two or three years the attitude of the eastern dairy farmer toward the "baby" dairy industry of the western provinces was one of benevolent interest. The eastern farmer had long been taught to regard the prairie provinces as great grain growing districts, that might gradually turn to beef cattle, but in which dairy farming would not find a home for several decades to come. British Columbia, he regarded as a fruit province. Every year the eastern dairyman shipped car loads and car loads of butter and cheese for western consumption. Eastern dairy men looked on the west as a market that just naturally belonged to them. Now the easterner has received an awakening. The tables have been turned on him. Last year several car loads of butter were shipped from Alberta to Toronto and Montreal. The quality upon examination proved to be better than that of good eastern creamery butter. At the same time the eastern butter trade with the coast is a thing of the past. British Columbia dairymen are doing more to meet their own needs and what they can't supply, Alberta can. Competition from the west is going to increase on eastern markets. There is a great field for the development of dairying in western Canada, and behind the industry there is the brisk, progressive spirit of the west. The eastern dairy farmer might as well decide that his western market is gone and that he will have to meet with keener competition in his own eastern market than ever before. In one sense, this expanding industry of the west offers to the dairy breeder of the east a great opportunity. Western dairymen are already heavy buyers of the well bred dairy stock, both pure bred and grade, that is produced on eastern farms. This is a market that will increase immensely as dairying progresses in the west. And here we would like to sound a note of warning. There has been a tendency in the past to ship the bulk of the herd to the west and the reputation of eastern dairy stock has suffered accordingly. To spoil the western market for the sake of getting rid of a few defective cattle, is like killing the goose that may lay the golden egg. Many thousands of splendid dairy cows have been shipped west, both pure bred and grade, and often non-breeders, sent along with them. Montreal Family Herald.

Swine Raising of Juniors

Plan Adopted in Saskatchewan to Stimulate Interest

Announcement has been made that the swine competition for juniors to be held at the winter fairs this year at Regina and Saskatoon is to be open to boys and girls of Saskatchewan and Manitoba, ranging in age from those born January 1, 1902, to those born November 1, 1907. This is the first time that anything like this has been held in the west on a large scale. The prizes amounting to $400 are to be divided equally between Regina and Saskatoon, and are given by the Swine Breeders' Association of Saskatchewan. These fairs are being held under the auspices of the Saskatchewan Live Stock Board, the one in Regina being from November 27 to November 30, and that in Saskatoon from December 4 to December 7 inclusive. The pigs will be judged by the usual market standards. None will be eligible for entry which is more than eight months old. Each contestant will be limited to one entry. The association pays transport charges from points in Saskatchewan, and in case the exhibitor cannot accompany his animal the association will look after its feeding, and if requested sell it at the close of the fair to the best possible advantage. The same animal cannot be shown both at Regina and Saskatoon, but an exhibitor may show different animals at both places.

Thrift in Forest Fires

Sportsmen Can Help in Preventing Waste from Fire Losses

There are estimated to be 10,000 forest fires in Canada every year of all sizes and descriptions. Nine tenths are set by human hands, and the damage runs from four to ten millions of dollars, not counting damage to soil, to the value of watershed areas and many other factors.

"Thrift in forest fires" is a new movement which the Canadian Forestry Association has started amongst the guides, and campers and sportsmen of Canada with a view to cutting down the country's timber losses in 1917. As is well known, the present-day causes of forest fires are not the railways as much as the settlers, campers, hunters and fishermen. Thoughtlessness in respect to camp fires, the throwing away of lighted tobacco, matches, etc., has caused some of the worst conflagrations in history. During the months of May and June, before the fire season is well under way this year, thousands of outdoors men are being asked by the co-operation of the newspaper publishers of Canada to make 1917 a year of thrift in the forest. Not only is Canada's exhaustible supply of timber seriously reduced in a time when it should be protected and improved by every possible means, but hundreds of miles of once excellent fishing and hunting grounds are turned into blackened ruins.

No camp fire should be left this year until it is "dead out." A few extra pails of water or spades of sand will make this point certain. No fire should be set except among rocks or gravel, never in a bog or in leaves of needles. Throwing lighted tobacco or matches into the forest is conduct that is chargeable only to the amateur.

A Wager Not Yet Won

Charles James Fox considered that there was a sporting chance of the Turks losing all their European possessions within his lifetime, according to the London Chronicle, an old betting-book, preserved at Brook's club contains an entry showing that in 1778 Fox gave Mr. Shirley ten guineas to bet that he would stand Mr. Fox should receive 500 whenever Turkey in Europe belonged to a western power or powers.

"I'm doing my best to get ahead," asserted Cholly. "Well, heaven knows you need one," asserted Dolly.

A very large congregation was

Is the Golden Opportunity

Until recently there has been no market for farm lands, but owing to conditions brought about by the present war, and the fact that we have had two good crops, there are a number of buyers on the market, but it is hard to tell how long this will continue.

If you had thought of selling out,
now is the time, as we have buyers wanting improved lands, and some raw land snaps.

You can judge the land market by the wheat, or any other market.
How many get the top price?
Many sell too soon, while others wait too long and miss an opportunity.
The farmer that sold his land last year sold too soon. Now you can get a fair price. The crop failure this year would mean that you waited too long.

Do not wait for the last dollar, as you are taking a risk.
Our connections and advertising system will help you, and if you call on us, or write us, stating that you wish to sell, we will be glad to inspect your farm and give you our proposition our immediate attention.
